P. 441. Another edition of Lambarde's perambulation,' 12mo.

P. 442. Philpot's Kent was reprinted by Whittingham, 1776.

P. 446. Add to l. 6. But both his collections of antiquities, as well as his papers relating to them, and his transcript of the monumental inscriptions throughout the diocese, are locked up by his will, so as to be of no use to any one.

Mr. Mores had visitations of Kent, 1574 and 1619, with considerable additions by himself, and pedigrees of Kentish families by himself, bought at his sale by Mr. Hasted.

P. 449. Mr. Papillon, 1737, shewed the Antiquary Society an illuminated map of Rumney marsh, and the adjacent counties, copied from an authentic MS. survey, done in the year 1617, by Mathew Poker, and engraved by James Cole.

'Five letters on the state of the poor in the county of Kent.'

Not published, 8vo.

P. 450. A poem on the custom of Gavelkind, said to be written by one Hawke, is cited in Harris's history of Kent, p. 460. and inquired after in Gent. Mag. March 1778, p. 123.

P. 451. In a folio pamphlet published by Titus Oates, printed 1679, and entitled, 'The Pope's warehouse, or the merchandise of the whore of Rome,' is a catalogue of the reliques formerly in the cathedral of Canterbury, which Oates says was taken out of an old written book yet remaining in the cathedral church of Canterbury. This book is called 'Memorale multorum Henrici prioris.'

P. 453. Last line of text. Gostling's walk was republished 1777, 8vo. with additions, and above 20 new plates, for the benefit of the author's daughter; and again in *12mo.

Another view of Woolwich and Rochester, by the same.

'Mr. Williamson's memoirs of a few passages transacted by Mr. Joseph Allen, late master-builder at his majesty's ship-yard, Deptford, when Mr. Williamson was employed to convert the timber. London, 1717.' 8vo.

'A sermon preached at Deptford, in Kent, at the opening of the new work-house there, Oct. 5, 1729; to which is added the oeconomy of this work-house, &c. By Charles Chambres, M. A. vicar. London, 1729.' 8vo.

P. 472. It is asserted in his art. in Biogr. Brit. n. B. that Alleyn the founder of Dulwich college was one of the original actors in Shakspeare's plays: of this there is no evidence; on the contrary there is great reason to believe that he had no concern in them. His name does not appear in the list; and it is certain his theatre (the Fortune) was different from either of those where Shakspeare had the management.

The author of a note in Dodsley's Collection of Old Plays, vol. XII. who signs himself T. B. speaking of the plunder of this library; says, 'The majority of plays and romances given by W. Cartwright to Dulwich college, were long ago exchanged for pondrous tomes of controversial divinity, &c. at the repeated solicitations of our most early modern collectors of dramatic entertainments. The few remaining pieces relative to the theatre, have by degrees been *filched away, under pretence of borrowing, by members of the same conscientious fraternity. A complete list of these dissipated curiosities was, however, visible in the collegiate library no later than the year 1778. It appears likewise from another ancient catalogue in the same place, that Mr. Alleyn's pictures have been preserved with as little fidelity, most of them being carried away, and their places supplied with such as would disgrace the walls of an ale-house: nay, even his only manuscript (his diary often quoted in the Biographia Britannica) has been lost through the carelessness of the society which his beneficence had founded. So injudicious is it to entrust articles allied to taste and literature under the guardianship of mere mechanicks, who prefer quantity to quality, glare of colours to propriety of design, and the new<s-paper> of the day to the most curious memoir of a remoter a<ge.'>
